RALPH CARTWRIGHT WINS AGAIN

Congratulations to one of our younger members, Ralph Cartwright of Parma, Ohio, who recently won the annual North Royalton 5-mile Bear Run. And not only did Ralph just win the race, but he was so far ahead of the rest of the pack, that no other runner was even in sight when he crossed the finish line. Ralph, who is in his early twenties, is a repeat winner in this race, and also holds victories in running events at the annual Scottish Games in Oberlin, Ohio. Adding to the list of Ralph's accomplishments, is that he once performed the feat of riding his bicycle from Cleveland to the Indiana border and back in four rainy November days. Of course, Ralph comes from a solid family of active Alliance members, and physical accomplishments also run in the family, as he, his father, and younger sister once rode their bicycles roundtrip from Cleveland to Kentucky by way of West Virginia.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA NEWS

Continuing the success of their initial meeting this past May in southern California, the members there are continuing their regular monthly meetings and planning for the future, in the hopes that soon they will become an official National Alliance Local Unit. They already have new members, as well as other individuals that have expressed an interest in attending their monthly meetings so that they may hear the Alliance message. The southern California group is positive that their numbers will soon increase.

They are all a very dedicated group of members, with strong motivations and drive to make the southern California group a strong Local Unit that will have many successes in the months to come. After the conclusion of their last meeting in November, the group was so energized and recharged that they went on a leaflet distribution in the coastal town of Carlsbad, a very upscale town in southern California.

They distributed about 200 of the "Love Your Race" / "Stop Affirmative Action" 2"x4" cards that are the creation of Francisco L., a very dedicated National Alliance member in southern California.

We wish them all the success they can have, especially in the coming year.

THE PREFERRED MEMBER

A newly signed up member, a young man from southwestern Virginia, who's anxious to get started in spreading our message, isn't waiting for his membership package to arrive.

Immediately after signing up online, the new recruit was downloading leaflets from our Web site and getting them copied, and then distributing them locally to other young people at a local college campus.

Although there is a local Klan group that he could have affiliated with, the young recruit was put off by their lack of sophistication, substance, and gross reactionary ideas.

We welcome this young man as a model for the attributes of a preferred new member. Those preferred attributes are youth, intelligence, and motivation. In the youth is our future.

FRANCISCO'S ACTIVITIES

Super-activist Francisco L. of southern California spends every available moment delivering our message to residents in the Greater Los Angeles area. He then follows-up with his distributions by emailing an After Action Report to Chairman Giebe. Here is a recent sampling of some of Francisco's activities.

SACRAMENTO UNIT LAUNCHES LOCAL WEB SITE

The Sacramento Unit now has its own National Alliance Web page, which will enhance our local presence in northern California even more effectively than just with our phone message service alone. The service appeared on the Web on December 11.

The new Web site is a work in progress and will have more features as time goes on, including but not limited to streaming video and audio, plus photos. Links to all of the Alliance's various Web sites appear as well.

Local inquiries can now be taken via the Web site through a separate e-mail account. The local e-mail address is natallsac@gmail.com.

Our local phone number is also listed along with the phone number for southern California inquiries.

PREPARING FOR SUCCESS

*Commentary
by Chairman Gliebe*

Everyone knows that only rarely does success come to an individual or an organization out of the blue. Most of the time, success is the result of formulating a clear goal, setting out a plan by which the goal can be achieved, and the diligent carrying-out of the plan. Those steps take time, and they are usually done behind the scenes, before others notice that work is being done.

If those prerequisites are followed, the situation is ripe for success. Sometimes, an element of luck or chance also has to intervene in order for a particular person to achieve success. But to say that most of those who are successful are just lucky...is wrong. Most of the time, a lot of time and effort have been invested in order to get a person fully prepared so that when their "break" does arrive, the prepared individual or organization is ready to take advantage of the situation.

This recipe for success has been found to work in many different cases. Many professional athletes, in addition to having been naturally gifted with motor skills and coordination, have put in years of work in order to make themselves the best possible athletes they can. The same is true of musicians, most of whom work hard for long years to build up to a high level of success. Good accountants, doctors, lawyers, craftsmen — well, practically everyone — have endured long periods of training and practice before achieving a high level of performance.

What is true about succeeding as an individual also holds true for groups. Businesses often invest much time and money before reaping the financial rewards of business success. New churches and volunteer organizations usually start small and grow over time. Even sports franchises try to project how their draft picks and other roster moves will affect the franchise not just today, but also how they will affect the long-term success of the organization.

Organized racial groups, too, require much investment before the big rewards arrive. The Jews began investing in American newspapers as long ago as the late 19th Century. They moved into movies in the early 20th Century, and expanded into other media — other printed media, and the television and music industries — sometime later. All of that investing took a lot of money and a lot of work but, as the years have passed, the rewards that the Jews have reaped for all of that invested time and effort are obvious. With very few exceptions, the Jewish media power is able to push opinions and events in America so that whatever they want to get done, they CAN get done. Wars on behalf of Israel, race-mixing, immigration — you name it — the large investment that the Jews have made in the media has been reclaimed a millionfold. In fact, the long-term thinking of the Jews as compared to the short-range thinking of mainstream White society has been one of the root causes of our race's decline over the last two hundred years.

Those of us who are active parts of the White Racialist Cause understand that the Cause is in the same boat: We started out small and have grown some over the years, and we believe that our hard work and dedication will pay off bigger and bigger dividends in the future. Eventually, we want to have enough muscle to redirect the entire course of history, such that societies will no longer be solely based on arbitrary geographical boundaries, but will be based on racial divisions which will then be separated and placed into distinct geographical zones. At the moment, to the average mainstream

American citizen, such a state of affairs seems a very distant possibility but, with success, one never quite knows when the biggest and most visible leap will come.

Think about what happened in Germany in the 1920s and 1930s. When Hitler joined the German Workers Party in 1919, the party was small and insignificant. Even as Hitler started to build the party into the instrument he envisioned to save Germany, it remained largely unknown. But the economic woes of the reparations policy imposed on Germany after the First World War — coupled with the worldwide depression of the 1930s — changed all that. Suddenly, what was now called the National Socialist German Workers Party was recognized by a growing number of Germans as an organization fighting for the rights and rebirth of the country. The Party grew into the largest political party in Germany within the space of a few short years, taking over the governing of the country in 1933.

So you just never know when the large amount of time and work you invested is going to pay off.

Farmers and gardeners have to be long-term thinkers and planners as well. Once they've acquired the land, they have to plan out what they're going to plant, and when and where. They need to buy the seed and the fertilizer ahead of time. They need to have secured in advance all of the tools and equipment that are required to do the work.

Once all of that preliminary work is complete, only then can they put the seeds into the ground. But the work is far from done at that point. There is no guarantee that the seeds will come up. Those that do could get plucked up by birds or other animals. And, of course, weeds are a perennial problem for those who till the earth, and even for the rest of us who just want a lawn that looks decent.

There are several ways to control weeds. If you've got a lot of them, probably the quickest and easiest way is to use some kind of weed killer, a herbicide in liquid or pellet form that will take care of the weeds in a large space in a short amount of time. Herbicides have been the method of choice of American farmers for decades, simply because the large areas of land make it impractical to weed by hand.

But that mode of thinking is changing. The fear of chemical contamination of the food grown on land that is treated with herbicides and pesticides is growing. Most people agree that chemical contamination won't have an immediate, negative effect on a person. Rather, the fear is that — long-term — the cumulative effect of ingesting many different chemicals over a period of years is causing more cancers, allergies, and other health-related concerns.

That fear is at least partially responsible for the increasing number of farmers who are producing so-called "organic" food: food grown without the use of processed chemicals such as pesticides and herbicides. More and more organic foods are appearing on grocery shelves; so much so that one can find just about anything he wants in "organic." Of course, to buy organic means to pay more, but more and more Americans are willing to do that in the hopes of protecting their children and for reducing their own chances of contracting cancer later on.

But it isn't just food grown using man-made chemicals that is the target of environmentally-conscious activists. They (and a growing number of others) are worried about the chemicals that have already made it into the water supply, as well as those that are continuing to do so. No matter where weed and bug killers are applied, rainwater eventually carries those chemicals into water supplies, where they work their way into the food chain, eventually making it all the way up to the human population.

Now, the activists of the White Racist Cause aren't concerned as much about the health of the environment as they are about the health of the White Race. Don't get me wrong: we don't want carcinogens in our food or water, but our contention is that the main goal now should be to secure a White living space and a White society under a White government: first and foremost. Once we have achieved that goal, then we'll be able to address all kinds of issues that — to our minds — we can NEVER address now, given that there are so many different types of people, each with its own agenda on every single issue. The din of conflicting viewpoints makes sweeping environmental or economic or educational or spiritual changes impossible in the present society. We need a homogeneous White racial state; then we can deal successfully with all of the other problems that worry us every day.

You know, the concern that some people have about chemicals in our food and water supplies is in some ways similar to the concern that White racialsists have about our multiracial society. In the short term, there are few problems. The chemicals in the food don't cause people to become immediately sick. In the early stages of a multiracial society, most people manage to get along with others of differing race.

But in the long run, things are different. Long-term ingestion of chemical-laced food and water is believed to be responsible for cancers, a higher incidence of allergies, and an increase in unusual health problems, especially among the younger portion of the population. And it is in the long term that multiracialism shows its evil side as well. Through interracial breeding, the various races begin to lose their unique traits. The unity and culture of the host population is fractured and lost as the number of aliens increases and the boundary lines between the races blur. In both scenarios — long-term chemical exposure and long-term multiracialism — the eventual outcome is unknown with absolute certainty, but the predictions are anything but rosy. Certainly, nothing that history has told us is “healthy” or “normal” applies to either of these situations.

But back to the weeds. Widespread application of weed killers is one way to get rid of these pests and, as I’ve said, may be the only practical way at this time for many farmers. But for those of us who just want a healthy lawn, a more environmentally-conscious way is to just dig the weeds out by hand. I’m told that it takes a bit of work to clear your lawn of weeds but, once that’s been done, it is a fairly easy job to maintain a weed-free lawn in the same way: digging and pulling them out by hand.

But one of the best ways to discourage weeds from growing in your yard — according to commercials on TV, anyway — is to have a thick and healthy lawn. When the grass is thick and full, there is little place for weeds. That makes for a better-looking lawn that is a lot less work for you.

We want the same sort of situation for our race. First, we need to separate ourselves from the other races, and then we need to weed out those among us who don’t fit: lawyer-politicians who put their careers before the race; businessmen who put money before the race; as well as those who promote ideas and practices that damage the physical existence or the social integrity of the race. When we find such people, we will dig them out of our social fabric and put them elsewhere. And then we’ll monitor our society — as some people monitor their lawns — to be on the lookout for racial weeds.

And then we’ll take to heart the claim made by the advertisers that a healthy lawn is a happy lawn. Once White Racialists are directing the affairs of our White society, we’ll promote the growth and unity of the society, making it even more resistant to the germination of racial weeds that pollute the integrity of the race.

But in order to do that, we’ve got to do all of the preliminary and back-breaking work that every individual and every organization has to do as a prerequisite for success. We've got to build the National Alliance and the White Racist Cause from the ground up, and we have to have done all of the little things that will make us ready to take advantage of the situation when the present society starts to come apart and we get our break. That's the element of chance or "luck" but, if we plan and prepare like we should, the ultimate victory of Our Cause will be anything but luck.

We're on our way now, but we'd like for you to join us. Stop living only for yourself, and start living for your children and for the brighter future of the entire White race.
